SAKE

PREMIUM SAKES

Premium Sakes make up approximately 30% of total sake production. These are of higher quality, price and complexity.

Daiginjo

This type of sake is made of rice that has been milled or polished down to 50% or less. A small portion of distilled alcohol is included to make the sake lighter and aromatic.

Junmai Daiginjo

This type of sake is made of rice that has been milled or polished down to 50% or less. No additional distilled alcohol is added.

Ginjo

This type of sake is made of rice that has been milled or polished down to 60% or less. A small portion of distilled alcohol is included to make the sake lighter and aromatic.

Junmai Ginjo

This type of sake is made of rice that has been milled or polished down to 60% or less. No additional distilled alcohol is added.

Junmai

This includes any sake that has been produced with only rice, water, koji mold, and yeast (without any added ethyl alcohol). There is no milling requirement for this type of sake.

Honjozo

This sake is made with rice that has been polished down to 70% or less. A small portion of distilled alcohol is added.
